Notes:-

Set away from the main road and reached under railway, entrance to works was formerly across Swansea Canal.

Late 19th Century. Former power house building to Morfa Copper Works. Rubble walls with quoins and freestone dressing. Wide slate roof with gambrel treatment to east end, continues down over side aisles, long glazed roof-lights. Remains of clock tower with trapezoidal base (formerly louvred with clock faces, weathervane etc.). Two stone chimney stacks with cornices to right, vents along ridge. East gable end has tall rounded-headed window with glazing bars over segmentally-headed doorway (blocked), this centre bay flanked by segmental windows with glazing bars above wide modern windows (blocked). Front walls of side aisles canted back, each with (blocked) segmental openings on ground floor.

Fine aisled interior of four-bays with composite timber and iron trusses (basically queen post construction), circular cast-iron spandrels between collar and ironwork. Gothic braces supported by slender, reeded cast-iron columns with capitals. Tensions braces and ties of wrought-iron and compression members of cast-iron.

Derelict at time of inspection (Spring 1986).

Group value.
